Design the new Business & Industry Training facility in partnership with industry to maintain technical relevance, and more importantly, to leverage Instructional Technology to regularly make them part of the education process. Expand on existing partnerships with Milton CAT and other partners that have already been involved in the ongoing instruction for students and initial planning for the facility by using technology to both bring industry experts into the classroom virtually for instruction, and bring students into industry to better prepare them for the workforce. Focus on building a regional business and workforce development center. Leverage existing partnerships with NHES, regional schools, program Advisory Boards, other industry partners and economic development agencies, and other institutions to centralize and organize our ability to be a training service provider.
